Merrimack County

Nestled in the south central portion of the state, equidistant from both the Maine and Vermont borders, Merrimack County is one of two counties that has no interstate borders; Belknap is the other. It is the location of Concord, the state capitol, which is tucked into a bend in the Merrimack River. The county takes its name from the Merrimack River, whose name was adapted from an Abnaki Indian word meaning "deep." The county was formed in 1823 from towns in Hillsborough and Rockingham counties.

Merrimack County contains 934.1 square miles of land area and 22.3 square miles of inland water area. Based on the 2010 Census population, the population density is 156.8 persons per square mile. Merrimack County includes two cities, Concord and Franklin, and 25 towns. The county seat is Concord.

Population Trends:

Merrimack County has long been the third largest county in population, and is about equal in square miles of land to Carroll County. It is, however, the fourth most densely populated county, with less than half the population density of Strafford County, the third highest. Population in Merrimack County increased at about the same rate for three consecutive decades from 1960 to 1990, with population growth rates of 19.4 percent, 21.5 percent, and 22.3 percent. Since then the rate of growth has slowed, increasing by 13.3 percent between 1990 and 2000, and 7.5 percent through 2010.

A portion of this expenditure will be offset by commercial hauler revenues. Currently we are paying $72/ton tipping fee for recycling at 1013 ton per year = $72,936. The increase in recycling is not limited to Franklin. It is a nationwide issue due to the downturn of the global economy, major change in packaging thus rendering some products non recyclable (which were once recyclable). Material recovery facilities, 6 of which are in New England, are not able to process some of the new packaging without plant retrofitting. Additionally, the recycling rate throughout the United States has increased so much that it has saturated the recycling market. China is a good example of what has happened to the recycling market as the downturn in their economy has created less demand for recycled products.
